The Top Line | Aug. 28, 2023

Friday’s observation from U.S. Fed Chairman Jerome Powell that inflation remains ‘too high’ seems to indicate that rates might go higher and/or remain higher for longer. Both scenarios will place further pressure on financing costs and refinancing risk, particularly at the lower end of the credit spectrum. Today’s manageable refinancing picture—considering the $57 billion of ‘B-’ and lower-rated debt (as of July 1) coming due in the next 12 months—could become far more problematic as time passes, with the volume surpassing $201 billion and then $410 billion over a 24- and 36-month period.

Key Takeaways

- Last week was a disparate one for rating activity. Downgrades outnumbered upgrades by more than three times, while the number of new risky credits and defaults declined.
- There were two defaults last week, both due to distressed exchanges and both on U.S. issuers.
- Mixed picture for credit pricing last week as credit spreads generally moved wider while CDS spreads tightened.

Data as of Aug. 24, 2023. Note: Weekly rating actions, weekly transitions, and industries most at risk are all global data. Data excludes structured and public finance. Upgrades and downgrades exclude no-debt corporate rating actions and confidential rating actions. Downgrades exclude transitions to default and confidential rating actions. Defaults from confidential issuers are included in the default tally. Source: S&P Global Ratings Credit Research & Insights.
Chart Of The Week

Chart 3

Defaults pick up into June 2024

As of June 2023, S&P Global Ratings rates 1,167 U.S. speculative-grade corporate issuers. Chart 3 shows the baseline speculative-grade corporate default rate forecast.

- Pessimistic scenario: Defaults rise faster as the U.S. enters a prolonged period of low growth, with persistent core inflation leading to elevated borrowing costs.
- Base scenario: Cash flow remains challenging for the weakest and most leveraged issuers in a slow-growth environment with higher borrowing costs.
- Optimistic scenario: The default rate falls as growth remains resilient and inflation continues to decline, bringing interest rates down earlier than anticipated, leading markets to resume their search for yields.
