S&P Global BMI Size Indices

The S&P Global BMI includes all companies with float-adjusted market cap greater than USD 100 million meeting 6- and 12-month median value traded requirements. The S&P Global BMI is segmented into size indices based on cumulative market capitalization breakpoints within each country.

Minimum size and liquidity criteria differ for frontier markets and size indices are only calculated for select frontier markets. For more information, please see the S&P Global BMI methodology document at www.spdji.com.

¹ The S&P Frontier BMI was launched later, on November 1, 2008.

2. Consistent History

Introduced in 1989 as the world's first float-adjusted global benchmark, the S&P Global BMI has used a near-constant methodology for over 25 years, changing only when necessary to keep pace with evolving best practices and market conditions

3. Modular, Non-overlapping Subindices

S&P Global BMI indices follow a flexible, customizable, building-block approach with clearly defined divisions and no overlaps, allowing market participants to avoid accruing unwarranted, double-risk exposure.

4. The Foundation for a Wide Range of Strategy Indices

S&P Global BMI indices also serve as the foundation for more complex strategy indices, including those targeting factors and ESG. Using a comprehensive underlying global benchmark with consistent historical data helps to avoid unintended biases when constructing more complex strategy and custom indices.

S&P Global BMI indices serve as:

- Performance benchmarks
- A universe for historical market analysis and backtesting investment strategies
- The basis for passive investment products
- The basis for more complex strategy indices
