Transition and Decommission of the S&P/BYMA Indices

September 18, 2026: Effective after the close of business, New York local time, on Friday, October 16, 2026, S&P Dow Jones Indices will decommission and, where applicable, transition to Bolsas y Mercados Argentinos SA (BYMA), certain S&P/BYMA indices.

Indices Transitioning to BYMA

With respect to the transitioning S&P/BYMA indices, clients will be required to access index data via a new process, remove references to S&P DJI's marks, and modify the codes in the files/schemes of the transitioning indices they receive. S&P DJI will also terminate client agreements for the transitioning S&P/BYMA Indices to enable BYMA to put new client agreements in place. These transitioning indices will not be retained, calculated, or distributed by S&P DJI after the above date, and no historical or ongoing publication of these indices will be maintained by S&P DJI. Should you have questions regarding the transitioning S&P/BYMA indices, please contact indices@byma.com.ar.

S&P/BYMA Indices to be Decommissioned by S&P DJI

Certain other S&P/BYMA indices will not be transitioned to BYMA and will be decommissioned by S&P DJI after the close of business, New York local time, on October 16, 2026. These indices to be decommissioned will not be retained, calculated, or distributed by either S&P DJI or BYMA after that date, and no historical or ongoing publication of these indices will be maintained by either party. Should you have questions regarding the S&P/BYMA indices to be decommissioned, please contact Index_Services@spglobal.com.

Details about the transitioning indices and indices to be decommissioned, along with their files (including the NC, NCS, and NS versions, where applicable) affected by this change, are linked below.
